How to Use this Template

Use when your name, address, date of birth, SIN, employer, or other identifying details are wrong on your credit report.

Before sending: replace all bracketed placeholders [] with your details, keep a copy for your records, and send by a method that provides proof of delivery (e.g., registered mail or a tracked courier). Canadian consumer reporting and collection agency laws are set primarily at the provincial/territorial level, so confirm the specific rules and timelines (often around 30 days for investigations) that apply where you live before relying on any deadline stated here.

Governing Canadian Laws & Regulators

- Provincial/Territorial Consumer Reporting Act (e.g., Ontario Consumer Reporting Act, R.S.O. 1990, c. C.33; British Columbia's Personal Information Protection Act also applies to credit reporting; Quebec's Act Respecting the Protection of Personal Information in the Private Sector and the Act respecting the protection of personal information in the private sector, as amended by Law 25) – sets out the consumer's right to dispute file contents and the agency's duty to reinvestigate, typically within 30 days.
- Personal Information Protection and Electronic Documents Act (PIPEDA) – federal law giving individuals the right to access and request correction of personal information held by organizations, including credit bureaus, for matters not covered by substantially similar provincial legislation.
- Equifax Canada and TransUnion Canada each maintain internal dispute-resolution processes required under the above legislation; a refusal to correct can be escalated to the applicable provincial Information and Privacy Commissioner or the federal Office of the Privacy Commissioner of Canada (OPC).

RE: Dispute of Inaccurate Personal Information on Credit File – [Your Name], File/Reference #[Number]

Dear [Equifax / TransUnion],

I am writing to formally dispute inaccurate personal identifying information contained in my credit file maintained by your organization. I request that this matter be investigated and corrected in accordance with applicable Canadian consumer reporting legislation.

The following information on my credit report is incorrect:

- [Describe the specific error – e.g., misspelled name, incorrect date of birth, wrong current or former address, incorrect Social Insurance Number, incorrect employer]
- Correct information: [State the accurate information that should appear on file]

This inaccuracy may be affecting the reliability of my credit file and could result in confusion with another consumer's file (a possible "mixed file"). I ask that you investigate this matter, correct or delete the inaccurate information, and provide me with written confirmation of the outcome and an updated copy of my credit report once corrected.

Under the applicable provincial Consumer Reporting Act, a consumer reporting agency is generally required to investigate a disputed item, normally within 30 days of receiving this notice, and to advise me of the results in writing. Please treat this letter as my formal written notice of dispute.

Sincerely,

[Your Signature (if mailing a hard copy)]
